“By including the pitch-side data, our next-generation engine now makes us the most realistic game in the world,” said Albert Roca, Creative Director at EA SPORTS. “Because we are embracing the whole body, we’re able to simulate and depict movement and interaction inside the pitch in an all-new way and provide a completely unique sense of realism.” The real-life data is captured by 14 cameras located on the pitch, and is used to recreate the unique way players make decisions in the game. The cameras are placed at the center of the pitch, at home, away and corner goals and in the penalty area. The pitch-side camera angle captures the player’s body in motion, including his diving tackles, aerial duels and overall offensive positioning. Players and managers will also use it to view their on-pitch actions and processes, enabling a new level of immersive tactical decision-making at all times. The pitch-side data will be used to optimize the game’s artificial intelligence, creating a unique game experience for everyone in FIFA on PlayStation 4. FIFA 20 developer Culture Shock Games, also based at London Studios, joined EA SPORTS to bring to life FIFA 20’s close-up view camera, the Pitch View Camera. This camera is a further evolution of the mid-foot camera that made FIFA 17’s FIFA Ultimate Team the first foot-mounted camera in a video game. “Our goal is to bring even more life to the experience of playing FIFA on the pitch,” said Cristian Parrilla, Creative Director at Culture Shock Games. “As the new camera systems are unveiled, the pitch-side view will become even more immersive and realistic, allowing the audience to feel what the players feel when they’re chasing a long-range pass or heading for a diving header. We’re really excited to see how people respond to the depth that we’re adding to the game this year.” The camera is being voiced by Milkingman, whose real-life voice was recorded for FIFA 20’s first teaser trailer featuring Harry Kane. With Milkingman now providing the audio commentary for FIFA on PlayStation 4, fans will be able to make the most of this unique experience. In addition to pitch-side cameras, FIFA 20 adds landmark moments including the first time a goalkeeper kicks a ball in a game,
